

Virtual Symposium: Making Global Citizenship Education for the Arts & Humanities

Wednesday, September 28, 2022, 10.00 a.m.-2.00 p.m.

Makerspaces – a close-to-practice talk about why the humanities need them

Mette Lynnerup Hollensen M.A.

Mette Lynnerup Hollensen M.A. is an expert in makerspace education from the Danish Teachers Resource Centre VIA CFU. VIA University College is one of 6 university colleges in Denmark and geographically covers the Central Denmark Region. VIA CFU – The Teachers Resource Centre is a part of the University College. We support schools, teachers and leaders on maker technologies, digital literacy, digitalization and much more. This includes courses with hands on focus, connecting didactic, pedagogy and testing tools and guidance on do's and don'ts. In 2021 VIA CFU had the honor of presenting their work and counselling the German KMK.

Mette Lynnerup Hollensen M.A. (Danish Teachers Resource Centre VIA CFU) will offer hands-on examples showcasing the potential of enhancing creativity and global learning in makerspace education.

Working with literature we encourage students to think creatively and critically, to reason and to ask questions. Working with literature in a makerspace context will allow students to do just that. In a makerspace we challenge and expand what literature studies can provide, like offering students different tools and approaches towards understanding core elements of literature analysis and interpretation.
