- Amerikanische Literatur und Kultur (ALK)
- Englische Literaturen und Kulturen (EL)
- Linguistik/Anglistik (IfLA)
- Sprachpraxis

Beginn unserer Veranstaltungen: am Montag, 17.10.2022

Die Online-Einführungsveranstaltung für Erstsemester (Bachelor und Master) findet am Mittwoch, den 12.10.2022 um 14.00 bis 15.00 Uhr (für Bachelor-Studierende) und um 15.30 bis 16.30 Uhr (für Master-Studierende) statt. Den Link hierzu finden sie zeitnah online. Eine Einführungsveranstaltung für Studienanfänger*innen findet nur im Wintersemester statt.

Die Anmeldung für alle Kurse erfolgt online über C@MPUS ab dem 24. September 2022. Die Lehre findet in Präsenz statt. Einige Kurse werden Hybrid oder Online angeboten. Details finden sie in C@mpus, in diesem KVV oder erhalten sie direkt von ihrer*em Dozentin*en.

Veranstaltungen mit dem gleichen Titel werden als Parallelveranstaltungen geführt, nur eine davon ist zu besuchen. (Examens-) Kolloquien bedürfen einer persönlichen Anmeldung bei den entsprechenden Prüfern*innen.

Wichtig – bitte beachten Sie: Änderungen der Raum und Zeitangaben sind nicht ausgeschlossen, auch kurzfristig für einzelne Termine. Bitte beachten Sie daher entsprechende Änderungen (über C@mpus oder Ilias oder als Info von den Veranstaltungsleitenden). Studierende haben verschiedene Studiengänge zur Wahl: Lehramt (Staatsexamen, diverse Prüfungsordnungen, BA, M.Ed.), Bachelor of Arts und Master of Arts. Die Anforderungen sind für alle drei Abschlussarten unterschiedlich und sollten der jeweiligen Prüfungsordnung entnommen werden.

Zur Teilnahme an den Veranstaltungen und deren Prüfungen:

Es liegt in Ihrem eigenen Interesse, regelmäßig anwesend zu sein. Die Veranstaltungsleiter*innen behalten sich vor, Ihre Teilnahme zu überprüfen. Bitte informieren Sie sich rechtzeitig bei den Veranstaltungsleitern*innen über die jeweiligen Voraussetzungen, um zur Prüfung zugelassen zu werden.

Bitte wenden Sie sich mit allen Ihr Studium betreffenden Fragen an die Mitarbeiter*innen bzw. den Studiengangsmanager. Die Sprechstunden sind auf unserer Homepage und an den Türen der Sekretariate und der wissenschaftlichen Mitarbeiter*innen zu finden. In der vorlesungsfreien Zeit gelten andere Sprechstunden.

Die Sekretariate und den Studiengangsmanager finden Sie hier:

1. VORLESUNGEN

VL Text and Context I: English Literatures Before 1800

This lecture offers an overview of key developments in English literatures before 1800, covering a wide range of different authors and genres. Students will not only be introduced to some of the most influential and compelling (canonical and also less canonical) literary works before 1800, and gain insight into major trends, concepts, and influences that have shaped English literatures and cultures: They will also be introduced to the various ways in which literary texts build on, respond to, and reflect upon changing cultural, social, and historical contexts. Individual lectures will be organized around selected texts, which will be announced at the beginning of the semester. Please note that this lecture is accompanied by “Case Studies of Selected Texts” (see course catalogue for details), for which students have to enrol separately.

VL Text and History I: Survey of American Literature I

This lecture course provides an overview of U.S.-American literature from its beginnings until the Civil War. We will explore various inventions and formations of “American” and “American literature” during this time of discovery, settlement, upheaval, and national rise to power, examining some of the fundamental ideas, myths, assumptions, intellectual concepts, and popular perceptions that have influenced the ways in which Americans think and write about themselves and their nation.

This course is intended to provide an overview of diverse literary traditions across a span of more than four hundred years. Obviously, due to the diversity of American experiences and the amount of time covered in this course, the survey will be relatively cursory. Your Norton Anthology of American Literature (two volumes) provides a more expansive selection of literary and cultural expressions from North America and you are encouraged to pursue these sections on your own as a supplement to the texts covered in class.

Required Texts: Baym, Nina, ed. The Norton Anthology of American Literature. 9th ed. Volume A&B. New York: Norton, 2017. Print

Einführung in die Wissenskulturen

Wissenskulturen in transdisziplinärer Perspektive (Philosophie, Literaturwissenschaft, Geschichte, GNT), Recherchemöglichkeiten, Institutionen der Wissensvermittlung in Stuttgart, Struktur des Studiengangs. Zur Ergänzung erhalten die Studierenden eine Lektüreliste, die im Selbststudium zu bearbeiten ist.

Die Studierenden bekommen einen Überblick über die spezifischen Aufgabenbereiche und Kompetenzen der beteiligten Fächer und Disziplinen im Hinblick auf den Komplex der Wissenskulturen. Sie lernen die Recherche- und Informationsbeschaffungsmöglichkeiten in Stuttgart kennen und werden mit den relevanten Institutionen der Wissensspeicherung und Wissensdistribution vor Ort vertraut gemacht (z.B. Württembergische Landesbibliothek, Hauptstaatsarchiv, Südwestrundfunk, Haus der Geschichte Baden Württemberg, Deutsches Literaturarchiv Marbach). Es wird in die unterschiedlichen Tätigkeitsbereiche aus dem Bereich „Wissenskulturen“ eingeführt. Die Studierenden sammeln vertiefte Erfahrungen im Transfer von akademischem Wissen zu zielgruppenorientierter Vermittlung.

Case Study of Key Texts I: English Literatures Before 1800

This seminar accompanies the weekly lecture course “Text and Context: English Literatures Before 1800,” which provides an overview of English literature from its medieval and Renaissance beginnings up until around 1800. In the smaller Case Study seminar sessions, which will take place every two weeks, students will have the opportunity to engage more thoroughly with the topics and texts introduced in the main lecture course. However, most seminar work will involve discussion and analysis of three literary texts that students will have to read during the semester. The focus will be on improving close reading and interpretive skills. We will also read and use secondary literature in our analysis of key primary texts. All students must attend the first seminar session they have registered for; each seminar group will then be divided into two.

Case Study of Key Texts I: Survey of American Literature I

This course accompanies the lecture course “Survey of American Literature I.” In weekly 45-minute sessions, it will provide students with the opportunity to engage more thoroughly with topics and texts introduced in the main lecture course. The seminar will also serve as a forum for unanswered questions relating to the material covered in the lecture course. Seminar work will focus on the practice of text study and it will aim to help students refine their research and reading skills. Students will acquire additional knowledge on the scholarly debates surrounding some key texts of American literature and will have the chance to develop and discuss their own positions on the texts and the texts’ historical and cultural contexts.

5. HAUPTSEMINARE

Contemporary Irish Poetry: Feminism & Beyond

Only four female poets appear among the thirty poets represented in The Cambridge Companion to Irish Poets (2017), repeating the minimization of women's poetry found in previous volumes on Irish poetry. This continued underrepresentation of women poets in anthologies and literary criticism needs to be questioned, since it distorts the plentiful contributions that women poets have made to the national literature of Ireland. This course aims to take up 'The Pledge' begun in 2017 by the Crescent Arts Centre in Belfast under the name of 'Fired! Irish Women Poets and the Canon.' We will rely on recent criticism and anthologies that embrace this pledge: Poetry by Women in Ireland: A Critical Anthology 1870-1970, A History of Irish Women Poetry, The Wake Forest Book of Irish Women's Poetry, and Irish Women Poets Rediscovered: Readings in Poetry from the Eighteenth to the Twentieth Century. Our objective will be to challenge assumptions about the dearth of women's poetry written in Ireland prior to the 20th century, before shifting our focus to contemporary Irish women poets. Thus, we will read a wide variety of poems by women spanning from the 18th to the 21st century to reclaim voices who have yet to receive the broad attention they warrant and to historically and socially contextualize contemporary poets like: Nuala Ní Dhomhnaill, Eiléan Ní Chuilleanáin, Eavan Boland, Vona Groarke, Medbh McGuckian, Caitríona O'Reilly, Sinéad Morrissey, Ailbhe Darcy, Doireann Ní Ghríofa, Leontia Flynn, Martina Evans, Paula Meehan, Annemarie Ní Churreáin, Colette Bryce, Victoria Kennefick, and Rosamund Taylor.

Required Texts:

A bound course reader will be made available at a local copy shop to approximate the hands-on experience of an anthology that better reflects the historical span and wide variety of women's poetry in the Irish canon.

Narratives of Climate Change: A Snapshot of the Anthropocene in the English Novel

In 1997, an international treaty with the goal to limit the emission of seven specific greenhouse gases (GHG) to a level that would “prevent dangerous anthropogenic interference with the climate system” was signed in Kyoto, Japan. The first so-called ‘commitment period’ of the protocol, in which 37 industrialised countries pledged to limit emissions to individually negotiated rates, ran from 2008 to 2012. Since then, some commentators have classified the protocol as a spectacular failure: global GHG emissions have actually grown since 1997. Other commentators, however, have pointed out the huge symbolic significance of the protocol, which highlighted the necessity of international cooperation and collective action, and which put global warming firmly on public agendas. Which is not meant to imply that the impact of human activities on the environment had not been on public agendas before. Indeed, humanity’s relationship with the environment is perhaps one of the oldest topics, if not the oldest topic, in the arts and literature.

Rather than attempting to provide a comprehensive overview of how literature has engaged with the environment throughout the ages, we will examine a very specific snapshot: five novels by English authors, first published right at the start of the Kyoto Protocol’s first commitment period. We will ask how these novels specifically engage with the tension between fact and fiction when read against the backdrop of scientists’ and activists’ increasingly dire warnings about the consequences of inaction on the one hand, and the cries of foul play by climate change deniers and conspiracy theorists on the other.

While the novels in question are published roughly around the same time, and while the authors share the same general geographic and cultural background, they are nevertheless very heterogeneous. If you are interested in attending this seminar, a willingness to engage with a broad range of genres ranging from so-called literary fiction through satire, near future dystopias to hard science fiction is a prerequisite. You should also be prepared to read a number of theoretical and non-fiction texts, resulting in a fairly heavy weekly reading load overall.

Required Texts:

Self, Will. The Book of Dave, 2007. Any edition.

Hall, Sarah, The Carhullan Army, 2008. Any edition.

Violence, Hate, Disgust: Negative Affect in Fiction

Since the “affective turn” at the beginning of the 21st century, literary studies have turned to examine how feelings such as hate, anger, disgust, and the extremes of physical and psychological violence penetrate literary works. We will examine the work of contemporary affects theorists and explore topics such as how vectors of inequality – gender, race, class, sexuality – demand fictional explication of negative affects, how antipathy in literary texts challenges ideals of sympathy and empathy, and how ideas about the role of affect in society change. We will discuss theories and concepts in relation to literary works from different genres, including sensation fiction, the social problem novel, and gothic fiction.

A lecture by Professor Pamela Gilbert (University of Florida) “Antipathy, Hatred and Disgust” (3.11.2022, evening) is part of this seminar, and students are welcome to join the conference “Victorian Antipathies”, taking place 4.-5.11. 2022.

The American Short Story: Focus 19th Century

In 1837 American philosopher and literary critic Ralph Waldo Emerson delivered an address at Harvard University called “The American Scholar.” It is regarded as America’s declaration of literary independence because it demands a separation from “the courtly muses of Europe.”

The literary genre to respond most strongly to this expectation was the American short story which is also often called a “national art form.” A. Walton Litz states that this “does not mean the greatest short stories have been written by Americans, although our literature can claim more than its fair share, but that the history of the American short story is a faithful record of our literary and social development.”

Our seminar will provide an interpretation and analysis of American short stories throughout the 19th century. We will discuss stories by Irving, Hawthorne and Poe whose literary sketches, ambiguous moral explorations and strict formal guidelines shaped the genre in the first half of the century. We will turn to Melville, Twain, and James, among other authors, who added and refined symbolic, realistic and psychological dimensions to the American short story. We will study short stories by female writers such as Orne Jewett, Wilkens Freeman, Perkins Gilman and Cather who added further literary elements and new perspectives to the American short story at the turn of the century.

In Conversation with Globalization: Build Back Better!? Germany, India, South Africa, and Italy (Online Course)

This is a course about the effects of the turn of times (Zeitenwende) in an interconnected world. It will address aspects of globalization and explore opportunities for shaping societies in the post-pandemic world. The discussion will take place with regard to Asia (focus on India), Africa (focus on South Africa) and Europe (focus on Germany and Italy). Course topics will take up and evaluate current debates in politics, economy, society and literature.

The online course is offered in cooperation with our partner institutions St. Xavier's College (Mumbai, India), Stellenbosch University (South Africa) and the University of Bergamo (Italy). Participants will study and learn together in a virtual classroom. They will work individually and in international groups. The course will end with an online international project week.

This interdisciplinary and intercultural course offers an excellent opportunity for studying in an international atmosphere in times of reduced travel opportunities. If the Corona situation allows, there may be an excursion combined with the project week. Tbd.

Introduction to Film Studies

The field of film studies evolved in the 1970s and developed three major areas of investigation ever since: 1) film history, 2) film theory and 3) film analysis. This compact seminar will introduce each of these areas. It will thereby focus on American film history, film theory (montage and auteur theory) and the analysis (or close reading) of exemplary film sequences (especially openings). The course thus aims at giving an overview of the discipline as well as at providing the necessary analytical tools in order to understand how movies narrate stories and create meaning through the employment of certain stylistic devices (mise-en-scène, cinematography, editing, sound).

Day 1 will focus on film history, especially through the lens of genre (film noir), Hollywood as an industry and the development of film language in early cinema. We will then proceed on Day 2 and 3 with classical film theories and the basics of film analysis with the films of Stanley Kubrick (particularly 2001 – A Space Odyssey), while Day 4 will be devoted to the analysis of opening sequences of films by Alfred Hitchcock (Rear Window, Vertigo and Psycho).

Required Reading:

Montage Theory and Early Avant-Garde

American Documentary Film

One of the first feature-length films that was labelled a ‚documentary‘, Moana (1926), was made by an American (Robert J. Flaherty). Ever since, documentary film culture has thrived in America, evolving as a distinct genre and generating different movements and approaches (e.g. experimental avant-garde, direct cinema, autobiographical documentaries). Documentaries have also been used as a propaganda tool (especially during WWII), but mostly conceived as an alternative or even in opposition to mainstream American film production with its center in Hollywood. This course will track the evolution of documentary filmmaking in the US chronologically, charting key films and movements from the early 1920s to today. We will discuss these key films in close (their modes of representation, ethics and production contexts) as well as how they deal with aspects of twentieth and twenty-first century US-American society and politics.

Monster Theories (HS/FÜSQ)

The monster is far more than the scary. As Jeffrey Jerome Cohen contends, the monster is the “embodiment of a certain cultural moment – of a time, a feeling, and a place.” The monster is a cultural construct and a projection of fears, anxieties and desires. The monster evades categorizations and threatens norms (as, for example, norms of the body); blurring boundaries and binaries, it represents an “ontological liminality” (Cohen).

This course will examine the monstrous from the perspective of Cultural Studies and situate it at the crossroads of We will focus on texts ranging from the 19th century to the present and examine them in the light of seminal theoretical approaches by Judith Halberstam, Julia Kristeva, Michel Foucault, Jeffrey Cohen and Jeffrey Weinstock.

American Cold War Culture: Literature of the 1950s

After World War II the United States emerged as one of two superpowers, leading the self-declared West in the fight against Communism, both abroad and at home. Aside from political decisions, the bipolar conflict shaped much of the socio-cultural atmosphere: it demanded a compliance with the values of American democracy, progress, and success as a counter-model to the societies of the Eastern bloc. As a consequence, economic prosperity for most Anglo-American families, a return to conventional gender divisions, and social conformity to middle class dreams, norms, and aspirations characterized the post-war decade in the United States. One of the first and central tasks of this seminar will be to trace the continuation of the nation's drive to conformity after victory against fascism and the establishment of a new world order. Then, we will spend the bulk of the semester studying how the dominant social climate in the United States was challenged by members of the Beat Generation as well as by an increasing number of "ethnic" writers, including Ralph Ellison, John Okada, and José Antonio Villarreal.

Nature, Land, History: Narrating Colonial Australia

When the British established a colony in Sydney Cove in 1788, they did so without negotiating a treaty with the Indigenous inhabitants. In the decades that followed, many Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, who had survived and thrived on the world's driest continent for upwards of 60,000 years, were progressively dispossessed of their lands, often violently so. Imported flora and fauna as well as colonial land-clearing practices yielded wealth and prosperity for some, but also led to the destruction of life-sustaining habitats and 'natural' environments. It is only in recent decades that stories of the 'settlement' of Australia have also been cast as invasion, that stories of progress and development on the land have also been narrated as destructive and unsustainable. This course examines narratives of Australia's colonial history, with a particular focus on nature, the environment, and Indigenous-coloniser relations, in a co-learning project with history students at the Department of International History at the University of Trier. The program will involve in-class teaching sessions in Stuttgart as well as meet-ups and joint online sessions with Trier. Together, we will read and study non-fiction history texts, archival material, poetry, painting, film and fiction writing, as we seek to explore Australia's colonial histories and landscapes.

Sustainable Futures across the Americas – From the Theater of the Oppressed to the Maker Space

In this seminar, we closely follow young activist poets, playwrights, and artists in their endeavour to bring about change towards equality and environmental justice across diverse literatures and communities. Along the way, we learn about current events at the New York Theater of the Oppressed and the Latinx Theatre Commons. Our seminar also features graphic novel Nuyorican Superheroine Marisol and the La Borinqueña initiative which supports solar projects. With Bilodeau's Sila, we examine a recent performance developed in collaboration with the MIT to advance public understanding of the climate crisis. Turning to current trends in digital performance, you will be invited to explore how working with literature in so-called maker spaces, which are currently becoming popular in schools, encourages students to use their theatre-making skills and engages critical thinking.

In a series of workshops (Gundula Bükler/EPIZ), we will be given the opportunity to explore the potential of performance and theater as civic, political practice, and dialogue with expert teachers and international chat partners (Programme Chat between Worlds/EPIZ).

Time in Literature (Anthropocene I)

Human organization of time and space are the major drivers of the Anthropocene, the period when humans are shaping the upper layer of geological sediments worldwide. In a first seminar we will look at how the social construct of time has been reflected in (Anglophone) literature (a second seminar “Space in Literature” will follow in the summer semester).

We have all become subject to and of the ubiquitous “space/time compression” of globalization, which is an ongoing process of acceleration not only of human activity, but also of processes in nature due to the impact of human civilization. The repercussion, that affects us all, is that a stable worldview is out of sight.

Literature figures where this space/time compression and its acceleration started, how it works and where it does not end and how it increasingly shapes our psyches and (social) environment. If sense and signification – space and time as social constructs – shape the Anthropocene, literature has always already been a part of it – as a geological force - and we would like to see if literature was able to keep a critical distance to the mere phenomenology of space/time processes (organization of work, media of communication etc.) or if it is just as much subject to these processes of acceleration. Our readings will contribute to the undoing of the detrimental causes and effects of the Anthropocene.

War and Literature

To deal with “War and Literature” in time of war enhances our awareness of the representational dilemma of depicting the horror of atrocious violence against soldiers and civilians. Today’s media coverage of the theater of war will be read against the historical background of authors (and photographers) struggling with the ineffable: Are there words (or pictures) expressing the pain of a deadly wound? Are there descriptive terms (or pictorial modes) for a massacre in which thousands die? Can trauma be shown or narrated? Can writing or reading, taking or viewing pictures, function as coping mechanisms? Have literature or photography ever been strong enough as weapons against war? Or have they been used for conveying propaganda messages?

Texts selected for this seminar will include William Shakespeare’s King Henry V, John Milton’s war in heaven from Paradise Lost, Alfred, Lord Tennyson’s “The Charge of the Light Brigade” and “Maud,” Charles Kingsley’s “Brave Words to Brave Soldiers and Sailors” and excerpts from his Crimean novels, excerpts from Mary Seacole’s Wonderful Adventures of Mrs Seacole in Many Lands, poetry of the First World War by Wilfred Owen and Siegfried Sassoon, Virginia Woolf’s Jacob’s Room, Mrs Dalloway, To the Lighthouse, and Three Guineas, as well as Beryl Bainbridge’s Master Georgie, Lucilla Andrews’ No Time for Romance, and Ian McEwan’s Atonement.

American Realism and Naturalism

This seminar is designed for candidates who take their final teachers' examination (GymPO) with the instructor and advanced students who plan on becoming teachers (M.Ed. 'Literary Competence'). Enrollment is limited and exam candidates will be prioritized.

After the trauma of the Civil War, the United States struggled to mend the cultural, political, and social wounds left by the bloody division between the North and the South. The years between 1865 and 1914 were primarily marked by economic growth, imperial expansion, and the emergence of new cultural conventions. These changes were accompanied by the development of literary styles that mainly aimed at capturing everyday social realities and forces in a direct and referential manner. In this seminar we will discuss the main tenets of literary realism and naturalism in the United States, analyze prose writings by some of their main representatives, and discuss how the texts both fit in and challenge classifications established by literary critics.

Colloquium for Exam Candidates

“Diversity on Stage” -

W. Shakespeare’s The Tempest (RSC) to C. Garcia’s Dreaming in Cuban

This seminar is designed for candidates who take their final teachers’ examination (GymPO) with the instructor and advanced students who plan on becoming teachers (M.Ed. ‘Literary Competence’). Enrollment is limited and exam candidates will be prioritized.

In this course, we ‘time’-travel from Shakespeare’s small, remote island in his The Tempest to the present. Along these lines, we trace seminal developments in British and American literary history, beginning with a recent RSC production of The Tempest. Turning to American literature, we address, especially, endeavours of ‘re/claiming the American dream’ through the lens of diverse communities, literatures, theatrical traditions and practices.

Meanwhile, we also take a deep dive and put our topic into the perspective of recent debate on diversity, cosmopolitanism, and belonging. From The Tempest to Christina Garcia’s recent experimental adaptation of her novel Dreaming in Cuban, theatrical performance provides open spaces for experimenting with new forms of expression and belonging. As such our topic offers a great chance for exploring the current A-level topic ‘ambiguities of belonging’, and initiating a dialogue with EFL experts.

Required Texts:

William Shakespeare, The Tempest (1603). Any edition.

Christina Garcia, Dreaming in Cuban. (1992). Any edition.

Colloquium for Exam Candidates Shakespeare Rewrites

This seminar is designed for candidates who take their final teachers' examination (GymPO) with the instructor and advanced students who plan on becoming teachers (MED 'Literary Competence'). Enrollment is limited and exam candidates will be prioritized.

The rewriting of Shakespeare's plays has always fascinated writers as one of the most demanding challenges in terms of artistically and politically responding to the works of the greatest playwright. The focus of this colloquium is on Shakespeare and the contemporary novel. Jane Smiley adapted the Lear story to the social milieu of twentieth-century Iowa in her best-selling novel A Thousand Acres (1991), which was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in 1992. From the Hogarth Shakespeare project launched on occasion of celebrating 400 years of Shakespeare's legacy in 2015/16, we will study Jeanette Winterson's The Gap of Time (2015) retelling The Winter's Tale, Margaret Atwood's novelistic staging of The Tempest in Hag-Seed (2016), and Tracy Chevalier's New Boy (2017) based on Othello. Finally, with Preti Taneja's debut novel We That Are Young (2017), we see a modern-day King Lear in the midst of the religious nationalism and the generational conflicts of modern India.

Please read Shakespeare's King Lear and Smiley's A Thousand Acres before term starts.

Modernism

This seminar is designed for candidates who take their final teachers' examination (GymPO) with the instructor and advanced students who plan on becoming teachers (MEd 'Literary Competence'). Enrolment is limited and exam candidates will be prioritized.

The purpose of this colloquium will be to draw a complete picture of the movement and epoch of modernism. Our starting point will be the second edition of Michael Levenson's Cambridge Companion to Modernism. Our literary focus will be on the texts included in the Literary Competence reading list, and on James Joyce's A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, his Dubliners, Virginia Woolf's To the Lighthouse, and Jean Rhys' Quartet.

Besides Levenson's Companion, we will also make ample use of other Cambridge Companions concerned with modernist culture, modernist female writers, Irish modernism, modernist poetry, the poetry of the first world war, the modernist novel, the Bloomsbury group, as well as individual authors and works, such as The Waste Land, all of which are accessible as Stuttgart University Library ebooks.

Please read Heart of Darkness and A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man before term starts.

10. Linguistic Levels

Syntactic Theory

for (A): In this course we will see how syntactic theory can account for the ungrammaticality of sentences like the following:

- (1) *It seems syntax to be fascinating
- (2) *It is reluctant that Martin will do syntax.
- (3) *How do you wonder what we will discuss?

In short, we will discuss all kinds of movement phenomena and empty categories. Moreover, we will be concerned with binding, control, theta and Case theory. Good basic knowledge of syntax is obligatory (based on Introduction to Linguistics).

for (B): This is going to be a hybrid course, i.e. in some weeks there will be in-class sessions and in other weeks, I will upload a video for you to watch at home. The ratio between in-class sessions and videos is about 50/50.

The aim of this seminar is to learn how to think syntactically. After reviewing your syntactic knowledge from previous courses, we will see how we can argue for or against a given syntactic model. We will be looking at how Government and Binding (GB) has dealt with certain syntactic phenomena, and we will then see how these phenomena can be accounted for in a minimalist framework. In detail, we will be dealing with binding, case, the internal structure of the NP, control vs. raising, and with a special emphasis, we will look into the internal make-up of the VP arguing for a more elaborated structure (VP, vP, VoiceP) than so far assumed.

for (C): Syntax is the study of the rules by which words are put together to form more complex expressions, including sentences. This course is an introduction to the basic concepts of syntactic theory, including lexical and syntactic categories, binding theory, phrase structure rules, and case. During the course, we will develop a substantial fragment of the grammar of English while considering linguistic universals. We will work with the textbook by Carnie (2007) "Syntax: A generative Introduction" and exercises.

Morphological Theory

At the core of morphology are words and word-based phenomena like compounding, derivation, and inflection. In this course, we will first consider principles which regulate morphological representations and processes and then discuss different theoretical approaches and their consequences for analysis. Extending our view beyond core morphology, we will also take a closer look at interface phenomena like morpho-phonological effects.

12. Language & Cognition

for (A): Corpus methods in psycholinguistics

What forces and principles are shaping the linguistic structure of the world's languages and their evolution? For instance, the distribution of word order types (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Word_order#Distribution_of_word_order_types). In this course, we will learn about research that investigates this question through the lens of large text corpora. In particular, we will learn how the analysis of text corpora can uncover the cognitive universals that shape language, such as dependency minimization (the tendency to keep the distance between syntactically related words small) and information-theoretic metrics such as surprisal, a mathematical measure of how surprising a word is in its context. The goal of this course is not only to learn about this research, but also to acquire the skills necessary to conduct such research. We will therefore spend a good amount of time learning how to analyze corpora ourselves, and the second half of the semester will be spent predominantly doing hands-on project work in small teams. The final goal is to conduct our own corpus studies and to write them up in the form of a small research paper. Prior programming experience is useful but not strictly required for this course. However, we do expect the willingness to acquire the basic programming skills that are needed for this course. Assistance will be given in the form of a compact programming tutorial.

Objective: Learn about cognitive universals in language processing, how corpus analysis can help to uncover them, how to conduct your own corpus analysis.

Prerequisite: Foundations of linguistic theory, syntax, semantics, pragmatics, phonology. Prior experience with programming is useful but not strictly required.

Requirements: Introductory lectures, discussion of research papers, programming exercises, project work for (B): Second Language Acquisition

The aim of this seminar is to provide in-depth knowledge concerning second language acquisition (L2A): How does it differ from L1A, which factors may be responsible for more or less successful L2 learning, what do we know about the L2 development of different grammatical aspects (Phonology, Morphology, Syntax)? Closely related areas such as first language acquisition, language teaching, and bilingualism will also be touched upon.

This is a discussion based seminar, which means you are expected to have done the readings before coming to class each week required course reading:

Hummel, Kirsten M. (2014 or 2021). Introducing Second Language Acquisition: Perspectives and Practices. Chichester: Wiley Blackwell.

additional texts will be made available in the seminar for (C)+(D): Empirical approaches to second language learning and processing

One aim of this seminar is to provide a critical and informed understanding of the challenges involved in designing and conducting empirical studies. Focusing on behavioral studies with L2 learners, we will take a closer look at how certain aspects of the target language are being processed by L2 learners and how that may differ from L1 speakers.

Our readings will be original research articles from various linguistic areas (phonology, morphology, syntax, etc.), and we will not only discuss their intentions and findings but also identify strengths and weaknesses of the different types of research design.

All texts will be provided in ILIAS.

for (E): Introduction to Psycholinguistics

This course is an introduction to psycholinguistics, specifically the topics of language acquisition, language comprehension, and language production. Students also acquire an understanding of research methodologies used in psycholinguistics as well as the ability to read original research articles in psycholinguistics. Readings include chapters from Julie Sedivy's "Language in Mind" (2019/2020, Oxford University Press) as well as several original research articles.

Students are expected to have read the assigned reading before class so that class time can be used for activities, to clarify difficult concepts introduced in the reading, to discuss the reading, and apply the material to new case studies and topics.

13. Advanced Linguistics (B.A./M.A. Level)

Advanced Semantics: Tense and Aspect

In this course, we investigate how natural language expresses the concept of time. We can describe events in the past, the present or the future. However, languages can express much more fine-grained nuances of time, such as the difference between “Nina had won”, “Nina was winning”, and “Nina won”. And why is it that we can say “Nina competed for three hours” but not “Nina won for three hours”?

This course teaches you how to use formal methods of logic, in particular lambda calculus, to model tense and aspect in language. Based on this, we will read papers on research questions related to tense and aspect, e.g., Do noun phrases have their own time, as in “former president”? or Where do German L2 learners of English have trouble with the English tense-aspect-system?

Prerequisite: BA degree completed or (for BA/GymPO students) Introduction to Linguistics, and at least one of the following courses: Semantics, Pragmatics, First order logic

Requirements: Doing lambda calculations, readings and discussion questions, term paper

Advanced Semantics / Pragmatics / Psycholinguistics: The Interpretation and Resolution of Anaphora

Certain words and expressions are interpreted differently, based on the discourse (a conversation or text) in which they appear. For example, the pronoun 'she' has different meanings in the below examples.

- (1) # She sat down.
- (2) Mary returned home. She sat down.
- (3) Sue entered the classroom. She sat down.

The denotation of the pronoun 'she' comes from the previous discourse context. That is why its use is unacceptable in (1), where a context is missing, and why it refers to Mary in (2), but to Sue in (3). We call pronouns whose meaning depends on the previous context in this way anaphora. To correctly interpret an anaphor, a human language user needs to combine information from multiple sources: Information about the literal word itself, knowledge about the world, and importantly, information about what has been said before.

This class explores the question of how human cognitive mechanisms of language understanding are able to integrate information from these various sources into a representation of language meaning. How do we know which referent to choose for an anaphor? How do different linguistic levels interact with each other when interpreting anaphora in discourse? This is a reading- and discussion-based course: Participating students are expected to read and critically engage with primary linguistic literature.

Advanced Phonology: Phonology in Heritage Languages

This advanced course focuses on grammatical and linguistic aspects of Heritage Languages and Heritage Language speakers in light of current linguistic theories and recent empirical research, with a strong focus in the area of phonology. Heritage Language speakers are early bilinguals whose first language (L1) is a language that is spoken in their family, and which is different from the majority language of the community. Through the analysis of the phonetic and phonological properties of different heritage languages, we will see how different or similar heritage language speakers are in comparison to monolingual speakers and second language learners of the majority language.

14. Psycholinguistics (B.A./M.A. Level)

Advanced Psycholinguistics: Human sentence comprehension

How do we quickly and robustly reconstruct the meaning of a sentence as we read or hear it word by word? What sources of knowledge do we recruit in this process? And how are they combined, especially when they conflict? In this course, we will read classic papers from the sentence comprehension literature which tackle these questions from different angles. En passant, we will also learn about some of the experimental methods used in this research and their strengths and weaknesses. Further, we will learn how to critically read academic literature and how to present complex ideas effectively.

Objective: Knowledge of experimental research on human sentence processing. Knowledge of theories of experimental methods. Ability to critically read and evaluate academic literature. Ability to present complex ideas effectively. Preparation for courses on experimental methods and computational cognitive modeling.

Prerequisite: Foundations of linguistic theory, syntax, semantics, pragmatics, phonology.

Requirements: Lectures, student presentations, discussions, term paper.

15. Kolloquien

Types of Degree / Modules:

LA (GymPO): Pflichtmodul 11 "Kolloquium" (27220/KLA(BF): 27390): Kolloquium Linguistik (272202/KLA(BF): 273902)

LA (Master): Linguistic and Literary Competence (70850): Linguistic Competence (708502)

Technikpäd.: Modul „Kolloquium Literaturwissenschaft und Linguistik (TP)“ (41030): Kolloquium Linguistik

Prerequisites: GymPO: registration for final exams in the spring of 2023.

M.A. (Ed.): completion of all other modules.

Requirements: presentation, final exam (GymPO, Technikpädagogik) or oral exam (M.Ed.).

Kolloquium (A): Semantics/pragmatics

Target group: M. Ed. students who have taken Semantic Theory, have completed all required linguistics courses, and wish to take the oral exam in Spring 2023

Topic areas: Semantics, pragmatics, psycholinguistics, as well as the topics fixed by exam regulations; at least one of your topics must be in semantics/pragmatics

Aim: In-depth treatment of topics in semantics, pragmatics and psycholinguistics; review of general linguistics; introduction to English diachrony

Prerequisite: Semantic Theory; ideally, you will also have taken one Advanced Semantics course

Registration: Sign up to the waitlist on C@mpus and send an email to judith.tonhauser@ling.uni-stuttgart.de with the following information: semester in which you took Semantic Theory, complete list of courses in semantics, pragmatics, and psycholinguistics

C@mpus-LV: 172225500

Lecturer: Judith Tonhauser

Thursday, 14.00 – 15.30, KII, room 17.12

In WiSe 2022/23, this course is taught as a Blockseminar. The course meets in person from 2-3:30pm on 20.10.2022, and you will have one-on-one meetings with Judith Tonhauser on 27.10.2022 and 15.12.2022. Otherwise, the course is entirely asynchronous. A regular, in person version of the course will be taught again in SoSe 2023, with oral exams in Autumn 2023.

Kolloquium (B): Phonology

The colloquium addresses advanced topics in phonology and its interfaces both in grammar (phonetics, morphology, syntax, semantics) as well as in applied linguistics (Second Language Acquisition, Heritage Languages, Language Learning, Sociolinguistics). It is an obligatory preparation for the oral exam in MEd.

Prerequisite: Basic Phonetics and Phonology, one advanced course in Phonology

Registration: Sign up to the waitlist on C@mpus and send me an email (sabine.zerbian@ifla.uni-stuttgart.de).

C@mpus-LV: 172225510

Lecturer: Sabine Zerbian

Wednesday, 11.30 – 13.00, KII, room 17.23

Kolloquium (C): Syntax

Target group: Candidates for the final M. Ed. module with a solid background in syntax who want to do their oral exam with me in spring 2023.

Topic areas: Syntax/morphology (plus the topics fixed by the exam regulations); at least one of your major topics must be a syntactic one.

Aim: Preparation for the oral exam; in-depth treatment of selected topics in syntax; review of general linguistics and the history of English.

Prerequisites: Syntactic Theory, ideally at least one Advanced Syntax course.

Registration: Sign up to the waiting list on C@mpus and send me an email (silke.fischer@ifla.uni-stuttgart.de) with your background in syntax.

C@mpus-LV: 172225520

Lecturer: Silke Fischer

Tuesday, 11.30 – 13.00, KII, room 17.23

Forschungskolloquium: “Latest Developments in Linguistic Theory (Phonology)”

The research colloquium discusses current work in phonology, based on recent articles or own work. Advanced students have the opportunity to present their thesis topic and receive feedback. External guests present their latest work.

Types of Degree / Modules:

MA Engl. (alt): Forschungskolloquium Linguistik (23480): Forschungskolloquium Linguistik (234801)

MA-EASEL: Pflichtmodul Research Colloquium in English Linguistics I (101530), Research Colloquium I (1015301)

Master Sprachtheorie und Sprachvergleich: Spezialisierungsmodule: Aktuelle Forschung (20200): Forschungskolloquium (202001)

16. Ringvorlesung / Lecture Series

Current Approaches in Literatures, Cultures and Linguistics

This lecture series offers an overview of current research approaches in English linguistics, American literatures and cultures and English literatures and cultures. In the course of the semester, students will be introduced to a wide range of different methodological and theoretical approaches used in current research in the respective areas, which will be presented and discussed in the individual lectures. This will enable them to get a deep insight into emerging research areas and identify as well as contextualise their own research interests in close cooperation with lecturers from both areas, linguistics as well as literary and cultural studies.

Selected approaches of the disciplines involved will be deepened in the accompanying seminars, which focus on Linguistics or Literary and Cultural Studies respectively and offer an arena to further explore latest research approaches in the respective fields.

Please note that this lecture is part of the Module “Current Approaches”, which consists of the lecture (2 SWS), and a seminar, which students need to enrol for separately. Thereby they can choose between a seminar (2 SWS) in either Current Methodologies in Literatures and Cultures or Current Methodologies in Linguistics (see seminar descriptions for details).

17. Academic Writing / Essay Writing

This seminar is aimed at teaching students to become good writers of academic essays or scholarly papers in English. The focus will be on how to structure, lay out, format and write a scholarly or academic essay in English and American literary studies or in the field of English linguistics. Students will also learn how to reference literary studies and linguistics papers properly, how to research, and how to find and use appropriate scholarly sources in university libraries and electronic databanks.

Required Texts will be provided in class or uploaded to ILIAS.

Academic Writing (for M.A. students)

This seminar will make M.A. EASEL students specialising in English and American Studies familiar with the most relevant aspects of academic writing. Our chief aims will be:

- a) to establish the close connection between academic reading (of both primary and secondary literature) and academic writing,
- b) to derive key concepts from the given texts,
- c) to come to terms with the relevant key concepts by acquiring the skills of cultural-historical concept formation,
- d) to integrate concept formation into academic writing, and
- e) to systematically approach the problem of how to write the best possible research paper in response to the given texts and to crucial issues prevalent in these texts.

18. Verbal Communication

Advanced Verbal Communication for Teachers

for (A+C): This course is about grammar: teaching it and using it. We will first spend roughly the first third of the course discussing teaching methods and evaluating lesson plans for use in a school setting. The remainder of the course will be made up of teaching sessions in which the students will teach a grammar topic. Grades will be determined based on the students' performance in the teaching session and lesson plan.

for (B): This course is devoted to a literary approach to teaching literature in a foreign-language classroom. As an outreach venture, this course will be the first part of a School for Talents Faculty Project, 'Sensing Literature-Talents,' about poetry devoted to the tactility of climate change. In addition to expanding your speaking acumen and your pedagogical skills in a live classroom setting at a bilingual Gymnasium, you will participate in a workshop led by the London arts practitioner Astra Papachristodou to make sculptural climate elegies out of beeswax and leaf skeletons. Over the course of the semester, you will each mentor one Gymnasium pupil. Grades will be based on your performance in the teaching sessions and the design of your lesson plans, aside from your participation in the mentoring program and arts workshop.

20. ÜBUNGEN / (SQs)

Play-Reading WS 2022/23

Students of English literature are encouraged to attend sessions of the group where we read plays by English or American dramatists through at one sitting. This is an excellent opportunity to get to know a variety of works, including some of the most up-to-date performances. Since theatres in New York and London have resumed staging new productions, it is about time taking a closer look on new plays which recently had a strong impact on critics and audiences alike.

The first three plays we are going to read focus on how reality is constructed. Nick Payne's play Constellations (2012) has now been continuously fascinating audiences for the last ten years, thus becoming a modern classic. It adopts an aesthetic which is reminiscent of computer games, offering multiple possibilities and alternative outcomes, i.e. alternative truths. Similarly in Nina Raine's latest play Consent (2017), the audience is again confronted with alternative versions of reality in the context of a case of rape at court. Moreover, Raine highlights in her play, how the private lives of lawyers and their dealings with often dishonest clients influence their 'objective' judgement.

The playing around with layers of reality, truth and identity was taken to new heights, when Dave Davidson's play That Is Not Who I Am (2022) at the Royal Court Theatre in London turned out to be a fraud. If you open the theatre programme another play falls out called Rapture (2022), which was actually written by Lucy Kirkwood. She decided to publish the play under a pseudonym, as she feared her own safety was at stake when receiving threats, because her 'thriller' is about identity theft and a real-life investigation of murder.

The other three plays concerned are more tied to historical themes. The Minutes by Tracy Letts (2022) portrays a city council meeting in 'Big Cherry', somewhere in the US. In a quite surreal way Letts shows us complacent, petty bureaucrats and how they react when historical stories of the past, serving as a source of social identity, are called into question. David Hare's latest play Straight Line Crazy (2022) evolves around Robert Moses, who largely landscaped metropolitan New York, to the great annoyance of environmentalists. Robert Moses serves David Hare as an example of how the iron will of this urban planner exposed the weakness of American democracy in the face of his charismatic conviction. Finally, Pamela Carter's The Misfortune of the English will focus on a true incident which happened to a group of London schoolboys on a walking tour of the Black Forest in Nazi Germany. What at first sight seems to be a recollection of tragic events, turns out to be an allegory of dubious ideals derived from a warped sense of national identity, which sadly has not lost its relevance.

Students of all semesters are welcome to our sessions, either to read or to listen. Readings will be primarily on alternate Thursdays, beginning punctually at 7 p.m. The detailed programme will outline the dates and venues of our meetings and will be available at the introductory meeting on Thursday October 27th, also again at 7 p.m. !!!

Visual Culture and Marketing (Schlüsselqualifikation)

Visual aspects of popular culture (Film, TV, advertising, fashion, social networks etc.) can be both subjected to a cultural critique and they can become the objective of experiential marketing. This is also what can be termed “Convergence Culture,” which is “where old and new media intersect, where grassroots and corporate media collide, where the power of the media producer and the power of the consumer interact in unpredictable ways” (Henry Jenkins). This seminar will offer an introduction to Visual Communication, the field of Popular Visual Culture Studies—and to Visual Marketing.

21. FACHDIDAKTISCHE SEMINARE

Fachdidaktik Englisch I (Erster Teil)

This first module of 'Fachdidaktik Englisch' consists of two parts. Part 1 runs in the winter term and part 2 in the summer term. With its two parts, this module is designed to prepare university students for their first experience of teaching English at school ('Gymnasium' or 'Gemeinschaftsschule'). It offers a systematic introduction to seminal theories of foreign language learning and teaching with respective state-of-the-art strategies and methods on the basis of up-to-date research.

After the completion of module parts 1 and 2, the university students will be competent to apply these theories and methods of teaching English as a foreign language to the needs both of whole classes and of individual learners, depending on the learners' levels and on the aims set by the curriculum. To prepare the students for their first practical teaching experience, this module will put a special focus on lesson design and lesson simulation with subsequent reflection. In the course of the module participants will find that what they have studied so far in the fields of linguistics and both literary and cultural theory will come in handy as there are multiple fruitful cross-references between these disciplines and 'Englisch Fachdidaktik I'.

Bitte beachten Sie folgende Modalitäten: Schreiben Sie sich nur in einen der Parallelkurse ein. Im Falle der Doppelbelegung erfolgt Zuteilung in einen der Kurse ohne weitere Rücksprache. Nach der ersten Seminarwoche ist kein Kurswechsel mehr möglich. Kurse kommen erst ab einer Zahl von neun TeilnehmerInnen zustande.

Fachdidaktik Englisch II (Teil 1)

This module provides an overview of the research, theories, and methods of teaching language, literature, and culture in the digital age, paying particular attention to the importance of dealing with diversity in the classroom. We will critically engage with current empirical research findings on teaching and learning processes in these fields, discussing their practical implications for the language classroom. In attending this course, you are required to build on and cross-reference with contents and competences you have acquired in linguistics, as well as in literary and cultural theories.

Types of Degree/Modules:

MA-Education: Semester 1/3/GymPO / Technikpädagogik: Semester: 9. Weekly Hours 2 Examination written Type: Pflichtmodul

Prerequisites: Für GymPO / Technikpäd. Modul: Fachdidaktik Englisch I (Erster und Zweiter Teil) und Schulpraxissemester

Bitte beachten Sie: Für MA. Ed. findet Fachdidaktik Englisch II als zweisemestriges Modul statt (Winter und Sommer). GymPO-Studierende belegen diesen Kurs im Wintersemester.

Teil 1 (Wintersemester) und Teil 2 (Sommersemester) bauen aufeinander auf. Das Modul dient der Integration unterrichtspraktischer, fachwissenschaftlicher und fachdidaktischer Inhalte Ihrer Lehramtsausbildung. Bitte melden Sie sich zu Teil 2 nur nach vorherigem Besuch von Teil 1 (Wintersemester) an.

Fachdidaktik II, Teil 1 findet im kommenden WS im Januar-Februar als Blockseminar im Anschluss an das Schulpraxissemester statt. Dieser erste Teil Ihrer Fachdidaktik-Ausbildung im Master dient der Reflexion Ihrer Erfahrungen aus dem Schulpraxissemester und der Vorbereitung auf eine vertiefte Auseinandersetzung mit linguistischen, literatur- und kulturdidaktischen Inhalten im Sommersemester (FD II, Teil 2). Das Seminar greift auf fachwissenschaftliche Inhalte des Master-Studiums zurück. Bitte belegen Sie FD II daher nur nach Eintritt in das Master-Studium und bereits absolviertem Schulpraxissemester. In wichtigen Fällen (z.B. Auslandsstudium) muss das Schulpraxissemester nicht unmittelbar vor FD II, Teil 1 absolviert werden.

Veranstaltung von der PH Ludwigsburg im Bereich Fachdidaktik II (Teil 1)

Gamification and Second Language Acquisition

This course is designed to give an overall view of the theoretical foundations and aspects of (technology-based) games and simulations and how they affect the acquisition of a second language. We will discuss the successes as well as the challenges and barriers involved in developing and implementing game-based technologies. We thus aim to increase our awareness not only of what we do with modern technologies and how we do it, but also what effect it will have on our learners. In order to obtain credit points, students are expected to attend this course regularly, participate actively, do the assignments and a presentation.

Bilingualism

The title says it all: Bilingualism! You will explore what it means to be a bilingual person by taking an in-depth look at various aspects of bilingualism including simultaneous vs. consecutive acquisition of languages, the bilingual lexicon, code-mixing/switching, non-linguistic aspects of bilingualism (e.g. cultural, national, ethnic, political), and attrition of languages. To pass this class, you will be required to conduct your own little project on bilingualism, complete reading assignments and prepare a creative presentation.

Understanding Classroom Interaction

This course addresses questions of the relationship between language and interaction in the foreign language classroom and its relevance for the process of language learning. It will cover issues like prominent theories of SLA/FL language learning, the role of interaction in these theories, appropriate research methods for studying interaction, relevant findings from different studies or their consequences for teachers and learners in the FL classroom. A considerable part of the seminar will be devoted to dealing with authentic material from the language classroom and different ways of analysing such data.

Kompaktveranstaltung: Learners with Basic Needs

Learning a foreign language can sometimes be a tricky if not challenging issue. Though not a major topic in ELT methodology, serious difficulties with learning English as a foreign language occur frequently in our schools (cf. DESIKonsortium 2008). In this seminar we will be dealing with reasons for failure and how to overcome them, theoretically and practically. We will mainly refer to secondary level, including Special Education Needs, but consider primary school as well, depending on the participants' major field of study and needs.
